VOL. XX.

STANFORD KY., FRIDAY, JANUARY 13, 1893.

NO. 91

LANCASTER, GARRARD COUNTY.

Quarterly court was in session Monday and Wednesday. Several cases were disposed of but none of importance to the outside world.

Jenkins & Burnside have commenced pricing and shipping their tobacco. They are shipping to the Louisville and Cincinnati markets.

As soon as the weather will permit Messrs. Batson and West will begin work on their large and handsome store rooms on Richmond Street.

It is "Major" Jim Crow Dillon now, if you please. He has purchased a regulation drum major's outfit and will wield the baton in front of the brass band.

Mr. W. T. West has resigned as deputy collector of internal revenue for this division. Mr. R. A. Burnside has been appointed in his place. The change will be made next Monday.

The fast flying "boat," sometimes called a train, which stays between Rowland and Richmond, managed Wednesday to get the 8 A. M. mail into Lancaster at 2 o'clock, P. M. This unusual speed is worthy of record. This train runs from Rowland to Richmond and return, a distance of 52 miles, in one day. Lancaster is indeed proud of her railroad facilities.

The carrying to Chicago of the old Libby prison for exhibition at the World's Fair is an act that ought to meet with the universal disapprobation of all right minded people. It only serves to keep alive the unpleasant recollections of the war that ought to be forgotten. If the originators of this despicable business could be incarcerated in its walls upon arrival and fed on bread and water during the existence of the exposition, it would be about what they deserve.

The funeral of Mrs. C. M. Reid, who died in Denver, Colorado, and was buried in our cemetery on the 8th inst., was peculiarly sad. The weather was intensely cold and the ground covered with snow, yet a goodly number of our prominent citizens attended the funeral. She was the wife of Rev. Charles M. Reid, a talented young Baptist minister, and son of Mr. T. W. Reid, of this place, who married and went West about a year ago. Her death was deeply deplored by her family and friends and her husband has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in his bereavement.

If the oldest inhabitant, or any other inhabitant, can remember a longer cold spell than the one through which we are now passing, it will be in order for him to rise and inform us as to the time when it happened. From about the middle of October to now, January 12, near three months, good fires have been necessary in every residence, office, store and manufactory in Central Kentucky. It is believed by many that the cutting out of the timber has been the cause of the severe cold winds that we have experienced and many good reasons have been given to sustain this theory. The establishment of "Arbor Day" by the Legislature does not seem to have increased the planting of trees, and our farms are bleak and desolate, so far as our native forests are concerned. Coal at 15c a bushel is pretty hard upon the poor; but they have to pay it or freeze.

Miss Myra Owsley, of Hubble, is visiting Miss Myrtle Wilds. Mr. Burt Spencer left Monday for Bryant & Stratton College, Louisville. Misses Lillie Grant and Lizzie Thompson have returned from a visit to Stanford. Mrs. A. H. Rice is visiting in Marksburg this week. Messrs. Dean, of Glendale, attended the funeral of Mrs. C. W. Reid, Sunday. Miss Nellie Dillon is visiting in Richmond. Mrs. Hattie Woodriddle and daughter, Mary, are visiting Mrs. T. W. Reid. Mrs. W. G. Dunlap and children have returned to Camp Nelson. Miss Lizzie Thompson entertained a few friends Thursday evening. Misses Mary Annie Wilmore and Mary Welsh have returned to Nicholasville. Mr. Sam Joseph, of Cincinnati, is in town this week. Mr. A. H. Rice, of Paducah, arrived Tuesday to visit relatives. Miss Della Hughes is visiting in Lower Garrard. Dr. Ramsey and family, of Upper Garrard, left Thursday for Mississippi, where they will spend the winter.

Atlanta is to have a new union depot, the nine companies running in there to join hands in its erection. The estimated cost of grounds, depot and train sheds is $1,500,000.

Just the Thing.

This is an expression the traveling public generally use when they find something that is exactly what they want. This expression applies directly to the Wisconsin Central Lines, which is now admitted by all to be "The Route" from Chicago to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Ashland, Duluth, and all points in the Northwest. Their double daily train service and fine equipment offers inducement which can not be surpassed. This is the only line running both through Pullman First-Class and Tourist Sleepers from Chicago to Pacific Coast Points without change. For full information address your nearest ticket agent or James C. Pond, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill.

A Million Friends.

A friend in need is a friend indeed, and not less than one million have found just such a friend in Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. If you have never used this great Cough Medicine, one trial will convince you that it has wonderful curative powers in all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs. Each bottle is guaranteed to do all that is claimed or money will be refunded. Trial bottles free at A. R. Penny's drug store. Large bottles 50c and $1.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The Door Keeper Writes a Letter.

(Editor Interior Journal.)

FRANKFORT, Jan. 10.—The House got down to business this morning and after disposing of some amendments to the revenue and taxation bill, took up the bill providing for a display of Kentucky's resources at the World's Columbian Exposition. It was championed by Hon. I. M. Quigley, of McCracken, in one of the ablest and happiest efforts since the convening of the session. Mr. Kreger, of Louisville, made an able speech for it, and our little Tom Pettit drew his well worn constitution on it and made a fine argument against the bill, pointing out its unconstitutional points and its class legislation, as he seemed to see it, in a masterly manner. It was a truly good speech, had he not been steering against the current. Finally about 12:30 the previous question was moved on the bill and all its amendments and voting soon began, which resulted in the passage of the bill by 52 to 33, and then the House adjourned.

To-day was made a memorable one from the fact that the House passed the World's Fair bill, but more so because it was the pleasure of the members and many others to listen to one of the most soul-stirring addresses it was ever my pleasure to hear, delivered by the Hon. John R. Fellows, of New York. He dwelt upon Kentucky hospitality and chivalry in such glowing and quaint terms that they must be heard to be appreciated. His reference to sacred things and to divine interposition and protection was made in such a reverential way as to wake the finest emotions in any breast. His speech was short, but the many nice things he said were so well said that I am certain no one who had the opportunity of hearing it failed to be thankful that he came, especially as he claimed to be half Kentuckian, and that the better half.

After the delivery of his speech Senator Carlisle, Kentucky's talented and distinguished son, who is to wear the worthy distinction of secretary of the treasury under the gallant and fearless Cleveland, was loudly called for and enthusiastically cheered when he arose to express his appreciation of their kindness and honors. He said his visit to the capital was purely professional and with a broad smile said he had been endeavoring to make it such since his arrival, but the smile seemed to say, "How gloriously I have failed!"

Gov. Brown was an interested listener to Col. Fellows' address and was loudly called for at the conclusion of Carlisle's remarks. He excused himself by saying if any people under the sun had reason to feel thankful it was Kentuckians and retired from the stand amid prolonged applause. Col. Fellows was frequently interrupted by outbursts of continued applause and his eyes filled with tears as his heart overflowed with emotion while he portrayed the beauties of our American system of government and our divinely blessed Nation. Col. Fellows is short of stature but a giant in intellect.

To-morrow Senator Carlisle will argue the lottery case before the court of appeals.

The senatorial contest is on, to all intents and purposes, with plenty of material to select from. J. C. Mc.

LONDON, LAUREL COUNTY.

Mr. R. M. Jackson has been made cashier of the London Bank.

A big fire Wednesday night, which caught from the flue in Judge R. Boyd's house burned it and H. C. Eversole's residence adjoining. The Jackson House was saved by persistent and hard work. Mr. Eversole's loss is $3,000, with $1,000 insurance; Judge Boyd's is $1,500 and many valuable papers. The books of Judge J. W. Alcorn, who had an office in the building, were saved.

The House rejected the proposed amendments to the constitution substituting December 31 for March 4 as the commencement and termination of the official terms of members of the House and Senate and providing that Congress shall hold its annual meetings in January.

Deserving Praise.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time and we stand ready to refund the purchase price if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. A. R. Penny, druggist.

The success of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in effecting a speedy cure of Colds, Croup and Whooping Cough has brought it into great demand. Messrs. Pontius & Son, of Cameron, Ohio, say that it has gained a reputation second to none in that vicinity. Jas. M. Queen, of Johnston, Va., says it is the best he ever used. R. F. Jones, druggist, Winona, Miss., says: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is perfectly reliable. I have always warranted it and it never failed to give the most perfect satisfaction." 50-cent bottles for sale by W. B. McRoberts, druggist, Stanford, Ky.

In buying a cough medicine for children," says H. A. Walker, a prominent druggist of Ogden, Utah, "never be afraid to buy Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger from it and relief is always sure to follow. I particularly recommend Chamberlain's because I have found it to be safe and reliable. It is intended especially for Colds, Croup and Whooping Cough. 50-cent bottles for sale by W. B. McRoberts, druggist, Stanford, Ky.

DANVILLE.

Mr. Wm. L. Reed, who is ill with pneumonia, continues to improve.

The funeral of the late W. R. Mock took place Wednesday; services by Rev. J. S. Kendrick, of the Christian church.

Utopia Lodge No. 33, K. of P., of this place, is now practicing the new ritual of the order, which goes into effect everywhere Feb. 19 next.

There will be a candy pulling to-night at the Methodist church. Mrs. Taylor, wife of the pastor, will superintend matters generally.

Councilman W. H. Harris is out, after a month's illness of grip. Mr. W. G. Marks is back in Danville, after an absence of a year or more in the West.

A telegram received Tuesday evening by Mr. A. J. Rice announced that his son, R. J. Rice, who was shot a few days ago at Fort Worth, Tex., was progressing satisfactorily.

Lewis Watson was fined $25 in the police court Wednesday for selling and permitting some 12 or 14 "gum-n" to play the ancient and honorable game of craps in his palatial mansion, situate in the alley between Main and Broadway.

The horses hitched to Embury, Dunn & Fox's bus ran away from the depot about 9 o'clock Monday night and coming up town, got as far as the colored Methodist church, on Walnut street, when the bus upset and was smashed to pieces. No one was hurt.

A number of legal gentlemen, who have examined the report of the revisory committee of the Kentucky Senate concerning cities of the 4th-class, which includes Danville, object to it because it does not confer upon the city authorities the power to create bonded debt, should it be desirable to build water works or other similar public improvements.

Thomas H., John T. and Emma D. Williams and Lucy Jane Corbin have sold to M. J. Farris four sevenths of the farm now occupied by W. D. Finch, for $16,800. This land, situated on the Perryville pike, belonged to the estate of the late lamented Dr. T. W. Jackson, and in the division thereof, there being no will, according to the laws of descent and distribution, was, with three more sevenths, allotted to the doctor's sister, Mrs. Sally Williams. The grantor's above named are Mrs. Williams' children. Mrs. Finch being another one, Mr. Finch by this arrangement now has three sevenths of the 600 and some acres.

A number of the Mexican war veterans of this town and county will make no effort to secure the additional allowance per month, some time ago granted by Congress, owing to the humiliating conditions imposed by the law. The applicant is required to swear and prove "That he is wholly disabled for manual labor and is in such destitute circumstances; that $8 per month are insufficient to provide the claimant with the necessities of life." This would "cut out" even the occupant of a county poor-house, for how could he swear that he is in such destitute circumstances, etc., when the county is providing him with the "necessaries of life." If when the democrats get in they cannot do better than this, they had better quit talking of "reform." Give the Mexican soldier at least an equal chance with the nigger!

The battle of New Orleans, which those who observe St. Jackson's Day commemorate, was a remarkably brief and bloody one, and recorded one of the sharpest defenses in the history of the country. The whole fight did not occupy more than an hour and a quarter. The advancing British lost about 3,000 in killed and wounded and the intrenched Americans but six killed and seven wounded. The flint-lock rifles in the hands of the defenders did great execution.

Just after communion services at Forest Chapel, near Aberdeen, Ind., the Lawsons and Swinefords, who have been at outs for a long time, came together. A terrific fight ensued and nine persons were fearfully bruised and cut up, clubs, stones and sling-shots being used. The pulpit and pews were stained with their blood.

The beer war in St. Louis, involving the sale of the beverage at the rate of 4 glasses for 5 cents, has brought out the admission that this rate can be maintained an indefinite period "at only a slight loss." Such a confession is apt to increase the difficulty of advancing the price to the old mark of a nickel a glass.

A number of Boston business houses were destroyed by fire Tuesday, the loss being estimated at $1,655,000. Several firemen were injured by a falling wall. Joseph F. Parker, a reporter for the Transcript, is missing and it is believed that he was buried beneath a falling wall and killed.

Of the 44 States Cleveland gets the solid electoral vote of 22, or just one-half, while of California's nine votes he carried eight; of Michigan's 14, 5, of North Dakota's 3, one and of Ohio's 23, one. Harrison gets the solid vote of 13 States and Weaver the solid vote of 5.

Stanford and Danville Railroad.

(To the Editor of the Interior Journal.)

The present high prices of coal, and of every commodity that is absolutely essential to a well ordered household, the recent gloomy prospect for a coal famine and the high prices of freight charged the shippers and consumers, as well as the people at large, of both Stanford and Danville, is sufficient to convince any sensible business man that both towns need an additional railroad. Each pays in freight, as can be easily demonstrated, at least $50,000 per year more than it would pay if each had a competing line of railroad.

A railroad from the depot in our town to the depot in the other can be built and equipped, if the estimate of a thoroughly competent engineer are even approximately correct, at an astonishing small cost. Such a road would at once relieve Stanford from the L. & N. monopoly and Danville from the C. S. monopoly. The saving to the two communities in one year would nearly build and equip the road. It can be easily operated upon its earnings and could perhaps be made to pay a dividend.

We have assurances that if 50 per cent. of paid up stock is subscribed the road can be built. This being the case, why is it that these two wealthy communities should not have sufficient business intelligence and energy to at once take hold of the enterprise, raise the necessary money and push it through to completion?

We make these suggestions for the purpose of calling the attention of the two towns to an opportunity and a safe one, too, of saving a large amount of money, which is under the present circumstances constantly being poured into the coffers of those two monopolies.

In a few days we will wait upon the prominent business men of the two communities to see if the necessary funds can be raised.

W. H. MILLER,
H. HELM.

POETIC GEMS.

Domestic Bliss.

Happy they, the happiest of the kind,
Whom gentler stars unite, and in one fate
Their hearts, their fortunes, and their beings Blend.

'Tis not the coarser tie of human laws,
Unnatural oft, and foreign to the mind,
That binds their peace, but harmony itself,
Attuning all their passions into love;
Whose friendship full exerts her softest power,
Perfect esteem calv'n'd by desire
Ineffable, and sympathy of soul;
Thought meeting thought, and will preventing will,
With boundless confidence.

Drifting Apart.

And all that fills the hearts of friends
When first they feel with secret pain
Their lives henceforth have separate ends,
And never can be one again.
The first slight swerving of the heart
That words are powerless to express,
And leave it still unsaid in part,
Or say it in too great excess.

—Longfellow.

Apostrophe to Life.

"Life! we've been long together,
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;
'Tis hard to part when friends are dear,
Perhaps, 'twill cause a sigh, a tear;
Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time;
Say not good night, but in some brighter clime
Bid me good morning!"

—Mrs. Barbauld.

(Printed in loving memory of a devoted and true wife, from her own selections.)

The Stanford Interior Journal crushes sentiment between the ruthless millstones of economy and justice and demands the whipping-post for petty thieves. But the Senate did not hear in time. The bill has been killed again, but not for the last time. When Gabriel blows his trumpet and the heavens are rolled together as a scroll, when time shall be no more, when the Grant monument shall have been finished and Tate, Tascott and Pope all caught for the last time, or even at that distant day when the Kentucky constitution shall be so plain that he who runs may read, the whipping-post bill will be found still bobbing up serenely, along with the penitentiary question, dog laws and good roads.—Courier-Journal.

C. & O.—Heretofore the Cincinnati Fast Line over the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, which leaves Washington in the afternoon, has had dining car service only for dinner and supper on the date leaving Washington, breakfast not being served on the morning of arrival in Cincinnati, but on the 11th inst. the service was made complete to enable Cincinnati passengers, as well as those destined beyond, to take their breakfast in the dining car before reaching Cincinnati at 8 A. M.

SENATOR CARLISLE has not yet said that he will resign his seat to become secretary of the treasury, but it is so well understood that he will that the fight for the succession goes bravely on. The Louisville Times' Frankfort correspondent, who is generally well posted, says that all things conspire together to make Gov. Brown's calling and election sure. In the first place is his own popularity, in the second his locality, in the third whatever strength Lt. Gov. Alford can command, as he is very ambitious to become governor, and fourth the influence of Senator Blackburn, who will exert himself for the election of a Western Kentucky man, so as to make his own prospects for re-election better than they would be with a Senator selected from almost his immediate neighborhood. All this may be true, and yet the governor may not be able to knock the perennial Gov. McCreary has a great knack of getting there and we always have an abiding faith in him. Govs. Knott and Buckner say they are not candidates and it is thought the fight will finally narrow down to Brown, McCreary and Lindsay. A poll of the Legislature by posted politicians show that Brown has 25 votes, Lindsay 21, McCreary 20, Clay 19 and Stone 15. The chances do seem somewhat in Gov. Brown's favor, but he is on the ground and the other candidates have not yet, with the exception of Clay, put in an appearance. In any event, the struggle promises to be a memorable one, long drawn-out.

An eventful, stormy and interesting life ended when the heart of Gen. Benjamin F. Butler ceased to perform its functions, Tuesday afternoon. He died at Washington, where he had been for some time attending a case of his own in the supreme court, and it is thought that the fact that it was decided against him hastened his demise. As lawyer, politician, statesman and manufacturer, he left his fingerprints on the sands of time, many of which should never have been made, and for charity's sake ought now to be obliterated. As a soldier he was a failure, save to harass women and defenseless people. Very little of good can be said of the "Old Beast" and "Old Spoons," as he was known in New Orleans during the war, so we follow the charitable injunction to say as little of evil as we can and dismiss the subject, confident that the devil will square matters to his own, if not to Benjamin's, satisfaction.

ALTHOUGH the people said in thunder tones on the 8th of November that they wanted Grover Cleveland to be president, the cumbersome methods necessary under the law to declare him elected have not yet been completed. Another step was taken towards that end Monday, when the electors in the various States met and cast their votes as directed by the popular vote, save that of North Dakota, which divided her three votes between Cleveland, Harrison and Weaver. This is a gain for Cleveland of one and makes his majority in the electoral vote 109 and gives him 277, Harrison 145 and Weaver 23. This ought to settle it, but it doesn't. The last step will be taken February 8, when the certified vote will be counted, and the result declared by Congress in joint session.

It is very gratifying to note that the House by a vote of 52 to 36 passed the Carroll bill appropriating $100,000 to the World's Fair. The Senate should follow suit at the earliest possible moment and settle the question of Kentucky's representation at the great exhibition. In the vote in the House our representative, Hon. D. B. Edmiston, was of course recorded in the affirmative. He is a progressive man and does not train with the mossbacks.

THE Californians, disgusted with the way the senatorial seats have been bought in that State, voted 187,953 to 13,442 for U. S. Senators to be elected by a direct vote of the people, instead of by the Legislature. It is only a question of time when a general law changing the mode of such elections, will be in force, and the shorter the time the better for the honesty and purity of the members of the highest law-making body in the world.

HON. CLAUDE MATTHEWS, a former Kentuckian and a graduate of Centre College, was inaugurated governor of Indiana Monday. With a democratic governor, both U. S. Senators democrats and that party largely predominating in the Legislature, the Hoosier State seems to have entered the democratic list to stay. Benjamin Harrison ought to be proud of his State, but he isn't, that anybody knows of.

THE Tennessee Legislature is talking of calling a constitutional convention. Don't do it. Profit by Kentucky's experience and endure the ills you have rather than fly to others that you know not of.

AFTER a long and brave struggle with the King of Terrors, Senator John E. Kenna, of West Virginia, succumbed Wednesday morning, at his temporary home in Washington. Less than 45 years of age, brilliant, ambitious, industrious and popular, Senator Kenna seemed destined to reach the highest rung of the ladder of fame, but man proposes and God disposes, and calls him from a useful life while yet in his prime. Besides serving a year in the Confederate army, five years as county attorney, two years as circuit judge and six years as Congressman, he had been United States Senator for ten years, being elected to that high office at an unusually early age. He was a genial and lovable man and his loss will be mourned sincerely by his intimates and sadly felt by the country at large.

THIRTY thousand people saw Gov. Altgeld inaugurated in Illinois Tuesday and hailed themselves hoarse to see a democratic chief executive again for the first time for over 20 years. A large majority of the States now have democratic governors, including the former republican strongholds of Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois. The G. O. P. isn't in it now to any great extent anywhere and the day seems to be hastening when it will entirely peter out. It has outlived its usefulness, if it ever had any. Let it be interred unwept, unhonored and unsung.

EDWARD MURPHY, JR., the Troy brewer, was nominated for U. S. Senator by the joint caucus of the democratic members of the New York legislature, receiving 85 votes. Hon. Bourke Cochran, who was not a candidate, got five votes. It will be remembered that Mr. Cleveland opposed Murphy's election, so it is possible that he will have the hostility of both Senators from his State.

THE handsomest of the many handsome calendars received at this office is that of the Richmond Register which is printed in the centre of a miniature reproduction of the first page of its issue of Dec. 23. The calendar will be sent to all the subscribers of that excellent paper, and it is a gift that any one will appreciate.

THE Newport Journal says the Interior Journal can tell a good many things, but it can not tell when the legislature will adjourn sine die. Oh, yes it can. The day before the next legislature will be sworn in. That is to say, about the last of next Christmas.

THE road convention to be held at Lexington on the 17th should be attended by practical men from all over the State. The question of road improvement is now one of the most important before Kentuckians.

ANOTHER of the old-line abolitionists, Gilbert Pillsbury, of Boston, has just gone at the age of 76, leaving but few to tell the tale of the movement that ended in civil war and the freedom of the slaves.

—M. H. McClurke, book-keeper for Haynes & Henson, Knoxville, used $14,300 of the firm's money and confessed to having done so when an expert began work on his books. The money was lost in the bucket shops.

—Paul Scruges and Henry Allen, who robbed and then burned Rube Atkinson, his house-keeper and little daughter, were taken from the jail at Cotton Plant, Ark., and hung, after which their bodies were riddled with bullets.

—The first official act of the new Populist Governor of Kansas was to respite a murderer who had been sentenced to death. The Governor is opposed to capital punishment, and in his message recommended that it be abolished.

—A dispatch from Harrodsburg states that on the farms of E. P. McFrittridge and Thomas Alexander, near that town, there never was seen the like of crows. They are starving and a few days ago killed a 300-pound hog and devoured the flesh.

—The Whisky Trust has formally adopted the Takamine process and will commence to use it immediately. It is claimed the process reduces the cost from 12 to 1.8 cents for a given quantity of alcohol and effects a saving of 17 cents on a bushel of small grain.

—Notwithstanding Mr. Blaine's serious illness he still enjoys music. An Italian organ grinder stopped in front of his house and began to play several airs. A policeman ordered him away, but a servant of the sick man brought a dollar, with a request to keep on playing.

FARM AND TRADE ITEMS.

—Hogs are selling at 7.30 to 7½ at Chicago.
—Canada has a cheese that weighs 22,000 pounds.
—Nearly 2,000 horses went in the 2:30 list last year.
—Jones Bros. sold to Prewitt & Wood 8 fat heifers at 2½c.
—I wish to buy 20 good milk cows. G. A. Peyton, Stanford.
—Joe Swope sold to M. B. Eubanks 83 ewes and 2 bucks at $4.50.
—A. F. Moberly sold to G. C. Abraham a pair of mules for $250.
—Nearly $12,000,000 worth of tobacco was sold in Louisville last year.
—Arion, 2:10½, will stand at $1,500 next year. He will be limited.
—W. M. McAfee sold to Light Hudson, of Boyle, a combined mare for $175.
—The Richmond Climax reports sales of 22 head 15-hand-2-year-old mules at $160.
—Phallus, 2:13½, was bid in at only $4,100 at the public sale of the late J. I. Case.
—MULES FOR SALE.—A car load of 15½ hands, 3 years old and all broke. B. B. King, Moreland.
—The Mercer County Fair Association is indebted $4,100 and will not hold a meeting this fall.
—The dam of Nancy Hanks will be bred to Director, a near relative of Mr. M. Smith Baughman's George Dictator.
—M. F. Elkin bought of Boone Bros. a lot of 150-pound hogs at 5½ and 3 850-pound steers at 2½; of Dan Stagz some heifers at 2½c.
—Tax Payer, a noted jack, sold at Columbia, Tenn., last week for $3,250, and Silver Crown, another jack, 16½ hands high and weighing 1,250 pounds, brought $3,000.
—Stanley Caldwell sold his farm in the West End to Duncan Goodloe for $3,850. Mr. Goodloe sold his farm to G. Cecil for $3,900 sometime ago.—Danville Advocate.
—Nicholas McDowell, commissioner of agriculture, has submitted his annual report. It shows the wheat crops the past year to be the largest ever raised in Kentucky. The supply of hogs is short.
—The second day's sale of trotters at Lexington brought 64 under the hammer at an average of $962. Egbert went to W. B. Hawkins, of Lexington, for $12,500; Allard for E. D. Wiggins, of Boston, Mass., for $10,000.
—At Woodward & Shanklin's trotting stock sale in Lexington, Al Hutchings, of Boyle, bought the filly Ermine, 2:13½, for $7,700. L. W. Hudson, of Garrard, paid $625 for Annie Hazen, a 3-year-old McGregor filly. The 48 head sold the first day brought an average of $648.
—The members of the Blue-Grass Trotting Circuit met in annual session at Lexington Monday. The old officers were re-elected and the following open-

HUBBLE.

—M. B. Eubanks has bought 80 ewes of Joe Swope at $4.50 per head.

—Mr. Charley Patterson, of Middlesboro, spent a few days last week at Mr. R. L. White's.

—William Stone informs us that he will do custom grinding for all who will call on him at his mill near his home, the old Stone farm.

—Business in all branches of trade has been good in this locality and the outlook for the present year is promising.
—It is reported that M. F. Herring will occupy the Swope house and if so we will be glad to have him and family come among us as he is a good man.

—The party at J. W. Bright's was very largely attended and enjoyed by all, with plenty to eat and good behavior prevailing through all the entertainment.

—I now express my thanks to the good people of this community for so many nice Christmas presents, which shall cause my very best wishes to follow them through life.

—I regret to say that Mr. Joe Swope and family will move to Irvington, Ind., about Feb. 1. They go to take charge of a boarding house there. M. B. Eubanks has rented the farm for $500 for this year.

—Miss Sue Gentry is on a visit among friends in Harrodsburg. If Mr. Sam Engleman can sell or rent his farm he will remove to Kansas. Joe Penman will occupy the James Engleman property this year.

—A very noted rooster was found dead on his roost Wednesday morning and on being examined there was found a lump of ice in his bill, which no doubt froze there as he tried to discharge his duty as a crower, till his breathing was shut off.

—Some of the boys of this lodge have been very faithful in their attendance during the cold snap, while others are absent a great deal at roll call. Now boys come in and enjoy the fire and ice water. It is here for you and free if you will only call and partake.

—Squire Bright and little son, Greenberry, started to Stanford Monday, when the sleigh broke down and both had to foot it back home. Misses Natie and Janie McClure, of Casey, visited relatives here last week. Wm. Grever is on a visit to friends in Russell county. Joe Rice has returned to Frankfort to attend school. Miss Maggie Spoonmore, of Beuna Vista, is visiting relatives here.

—The weather is a little hard on the young lambs, but the sheep men have saved most of them so far. Ed White sold to Lillard & Cobb about 400 shocks of fodder to be fed out by him at 25 cents per shock. Mrs. Eliza Harris sold to M. B. Eubanks and Col. Underwood a lot of fodder for 25c on same terms. Turkeys are selling here at 7½c on foot; chicken hens at 6½c per lb, and roosters at 3c lb. on foot. J. W. Bright sold some corn to parties at $2.50.

—H. L. Baker, of Lafayette, Ind., engaged to marry two women, and being unable to decide between them and not wishing to hurt the feelings of either by showing preference for the other, he got out of the dilemma by taking a cup of cold poison and then shooting himself.

CHAPTER V.
USELESS EUSTACE.

"You have arrived just in time to stand up for yourself."

Lady Belvoir, like the generality of perfectly selfish people, was good natured. So long as she got what she wanted she was very willing that others also should get what they wanted. Indeed, she much preferred their doing so, because it was pleasant to associate with contented than with discontented mortals. As for Percy Thorold, he was, perhaps, of all her captives the one of whom she was the least proud and whose allegiance she was the least anxious to retain. For one thing, he had wearied her to death; for another, she was quite well aware that he had been in love, not with her, but with the girl of her name who had long since ceased to exist; finally, he had never for a moment succeeded in touching her heart.

Consequently her feeling toward him was one of simple friendliness, and as she knew him to be an excellent man in all respects (except those which she cared for) she was honestly pleased to discover that he was smitten with the only girl in the world whom she ever found tolerable as a companion. She found various means of bringing them together, and amused herself when she

Those Collar Buttons.

The most aggressive of all of life's minor evils is a man's collar button. It is the most elusive of things when sought for and the most obtrusive when in place. Every sort and style seems to have been invented to abate its trying qualities, but it still remains an obstinate fact, and especially obstinate and uncomfortable when on the back of a man's neck rubbing and irritating the sensitive flesh. And when that collar button serves double duty and holds down the collar, and by being an ungainly lozenge shaped thing also holds down the necktie, then indeed is its presence felt most unfortunately.

Terrible boils have times unnumbered been occasioned by these ungainly metal things on a man's neck, and their toleration for so long a time is a matter of wonder, especially when the matter is so easily remedied. One needs to go only across the way to find the remedy, and it is this: On many of the newest collars there is the necessary central buttonhole in the back, which fastens over an ordinary pearl button which is sewed on the shirt. On either side the buttonhole two small flaps are stitched. The flap is stitched to the collar and is just its own width from the lower edge of the collar. These flaps are of three or four ply linen, and when laundered are as stiff as the collar itself. The necktie is slipped under them, as with the oblong button and no exercise, be it ever so violent, will loosen it from its confinement and let it ride the collar, as it has always had a tendency heretofore to do.—New York Herald.

An Extravagant Pair.

It is not generally known that the German empress, in spite of her many excellent qualities, is very extravagant, and owes large sums of money to the Berlin tradesman, one firm alone having a bill of 800,000 marks, or $160,000, against her majesty. The empress never wears either a dress, a mantle or a bonnet a second time in public, and everything that she buys is of the very best. It is all the more surprising when it is recollected how extremely simple her surroundings were before her marriage to Prince Wilhelm of Prussia, and even after her marriage, until her husband succeeded to the empire.

The emperor is also very largely in debt in spite of the handsome present made to him last spring by the Empress Frederick, who advanced him 1,500,000 marks.

His majesty undertook the greater part of the expenses incurred at the Luther festival at Wittenberg. The emperor has, unfortunately, not the slightest idea of money, and scatters it right and left, to the great horror of many of his royal subjects.—Cincinnati Post.

Useful Articles at a Fair.

"Old men's comforts" is what packages on sale at some recent fairs were labeled. The packages include a pair of gloves of knitted wool, a large neckerchief of soft woolen cloth, a package of tobacco and a pipe.

The "comforts" sold quickly, as many visitors could readily pick out among their proteges at least one "old man" who would welcome the quartet of articles.—New York Letter.

had nothing better to do by watching the progress of their mutual relations. They were obviously falling in love with one another, but were just as obviously unconscious of it, so that their satisfaction in meetings which they had never arranged and their ill concealed disappointment when, as sometimes happened, those meetings failed to come off, formed a pretty and refreshing little idyl for a disenchanted woman of the world to contemplate at spare moments.

Lady Belvoir's spare moments, to be sure, were not numerous, for she had many irons in the fire, and these naturally required pretty constant attention. Still, she was not so self-engrossed but that she could occasionally devote a little time to the interests of an old and valued friend, and it is certain that at this period Percy Thorold's opinion of her underwent a marked change for the better. As the spring and summer went on, and as his engagement to and rupture with his cousin passed into the category of ancient history, he became a more and more frequent visitor in Carlton House terrace. He was still by way of shunning the gay world, but perhaps his reasons for so doing were no longer the same as they had been earlier in the year. It is only quite young and quite old men who go into society for society's sake—the others submit to it in order to meet somebody; and if that individual can be met just as easily and far more comfortably at afternoon tea why should a busy politician neglect public affairs for the chance of a few hurried words in a crowded ball room?

But, of course, busy politicians cannot always count upon being free between 5 and 6 o'clock, and that is why Percy was unable to put in an appearance at Lady Belvoir's one afternoon, although he had previously given Miss Leslie to understand that he would be there.

"My dear girl," Lady Belvoir said, when her friend entered, "I am delighted to see you, but I'm afraid you won't see anybody except me today. I did ask Percy to look in, but I have just had a note from him to say that he is bound to be at Westminster."

"But really I don't want to see anybody except you," Dorothy replied, with pardonable mendacity.

"Oh, well, if you are sure of that," Lady Belvoir paused for a moment and laughed—"if you are sure of that," she resumed presently, "I'll ring and order tea. All things considered, I don't know that I particularly care about seeing anybody except you, so I won't send you away."

These two women, who had so little in common, had by this time at any rate a considerable number of common acquaintances, and upon these their conversation not unnaturally turned. Thus justice, without very much mercy, was done to many persons who, by reason of the narrowness of the present stage, have not been introduced to the reader, as well as to one or two who have. Mr. Schneider, for example, if he had been concealed behind one of the numerous screens which adorned the room, would have been forced to listen to certain truths about himself which could hardly have failed to make him unhappy, although he might have been to some extent consoled by hearing Lady Belvoir take his part.

"I don't know why you are always so hard upon my poor little Schneider," she said. "He isn't clever, of course; but one can't expect everybody to be clever."

"No—only I don't think he is a gentleman," Dorothy replied.

"Has any one ever had the effrontery to assert that he was? What do you mean by a gentleman? I mean a person entitled to use coat armor, and I don't see what all the other elaborate definitions that one hears have to do with the subject. Schneider has just about as many ancestors, I suppose—a few more or a few less—as half the men whom I receive."

"Very likely; but I was thinking of his manners rather than of his birth, and as for half the men whom you receive I never can understand why you receive them."

The truth was that Dorothy could not enter into the good humored disdain with which Lady Belvoir regarded her suitors, one and all; and as rightly or wrongly she thought better of her friend than most people thought, it provoked her to see the encouragement freely accorded to persons who had no right at all to expect anything of the kind. One of these was announced before Lady Belvoir had time to reply, and at the sound of his name Miss Leslie made a grimace. Mr. Eustace Moreton was probably entitled to the use of coat armor, but that did not alter the fact that he was lazy, selfish and inefficient.

Now, if Dorothy disliked this young gentleman—as she did very cordially—he had no great fancy or admiration for her, and although he did not go so far as to make a face at her, he allowed it to be plainly seen that he was both surprised and displeased to find her in the room. What business had he to be either the one or the other? That was what Dorothy wondered and what Lady Belvoir could have told her.

But Lady Belvoir only laughed a little, as though tickled by some thought of her own, and said to the new comer:

"You have arrived just in time to stand up for yourself. Miss Leslie has been telling me that she can't understand why I admit half the men who come here. Does that include you, do you suppose, or do you belong to the other half?"

Moreton had the manners of the modern young man, which, with all due respect to the modern young man, is tantamount to saying that his manners might have been more refined and urbane without any detriment to his general attractiveness. He sank into a low chair, felt for the mustache which had recently been sacrificed, and allowed some seconds to elapse before he answered:

"I don't know, I'm sure; but I should have thought Miss Leslie might as well have condemned the whole of us while she was at it. It's very evident that we haven't had the good luck to please her, but perhaps that is because we haven't tried as hard as we ought to have done."

At this Lady Belvoir laughed again. "Suppose you begin now?" she suggested. "I shall be happy to retire to the other end of the room if you think you would get on better without me."

"I don't think we should get on at all better without you," answered Dorothy and Moreton in one breath.

It was a pity that after so emphatic a concurrence of opinion they should have been forced to do without her; but at this moment two other visitors made their appearance, and so it came to pass that Dorothy and Mr. Moreton, being left sitting side by side, had to entertain one another whether they liked it or not. Neither of them liked it at all, and Dorothy did not even make an effort to do her duty, so that it devolved upon her neighbor to open the proceedings. This he did by observing in a somewhat aggrieved tone:

"I didn't know that Lady Belvoir had a tea light on this afternoon."

"I don't think she expected anybody to come," answered Dorothy coldly. "Not even you, perhaps."

"Hm! If it isn't an impertinent question, may I ask whether she expected you?"

Impertinent or not, he obtained no answer to it; but presently Dorothy observed, "I wonder at your not liking tea parties."

"Do I?" inquired Moreton, more in sorrow than in anger, "look like a man who enjoys tea parties?"

"Yes, I think so," replied the girl imperturbably. "Besides, if you don't enjoy tea parties, what do you enjoy?"

Moreton very seldom lost his temper, but then it was not often that he was tried in this way. He was now thoroughly angry, and if Dorothy had been a man she would doubtless have been requested in a peremptory manner to explain her words. As it was, he only remarked, with studied calmness:

"I suppose that means that you look upon me as an effeminate sort of a person. I am sorry for that, but I don't think I'll try to alter your opinion."

"I don't think you could," returned his implacable antagonist.

The young man stared at her in undisguised astonishment.

"I know you don't like me, Miss Leslie," said he, "and if you'll excuse my speaking the truth I don't very much care. But as a simple matter of curiosity may I ask you what your quarrel with me is?"

"Yes," she replied, "you may, and I will tell you. My quarrel with you is that you are good for nothing. I may be wrong, but it always seems to me that a good-for-nothing man is ten times worse than a good-for-nothing woman. It is sufficient for a woman to be something—pretty, for instance—but a man ought to be able to do something. If he can't he might as well never have been born."

"Oh, but I can do several things," Mr. Moreton replied composedly. "I can dance very well, and I can shoot rather better than pretty well, and—let me see, is there anything else? Oh, yes; I forgot my chief accomplishment. I am a really first rate hand at ingratiating myself with ladies. Not with you, of course; but you are the exception that proves the rule."

If he meant to be exasperating he scored a success, for Dorothy jerked up her shoulders without deigning to respond, and after that he could get no more out of her. That she had not revealed the true cause of her hostility to him he could hardly be expected to divine. How could he know that she suspected him of an ambition to acquire Lady Belvoir's fortune, and that she was convinced that Lady Belvoir, minus her fortune, would have had no sort of fascination for him?

As little could she guess what was in reality the sad plight of this hardened student of feminine nature. For Eustace Moreton Lady Belvoir's reputation had no secrets. He knew all that was said about her and believed most of it. Yet it was now nearly a month since he had become as wax in Lady Belvoir's hands. That all powerful woman had turned her attention to him the moment that she discovered how light he valued it, and such feeble resistance as he had offered had been overcome with ridiculous ease. It may be conceded that Eustace Moreton was a selfish man; but it is certain that the persistency with which he had followed Lady Belvoir accorded to late was not due to any wish on his part to make what is usually called a good marriage. He called himself an ass for acting as he did, and he knew that he was an ass; but he did it all the same.

Dorothy, for the reasons which have already been mentioned, determined to sit him out upon this occasion, and it need scarcely be added that she attained her purpose. He stayed until the other people had gone away, after which he glanced appealingly at Lady Belvoir and impatiently at Dorothy; but as neither of them chose to understand what he wanted he resigned himself to the inevitable and took his leave.

"Poor fellow!" laughed Lady Belvoir when she and her friend were once more alone.

"He is indeed!" agreed Dorothy, with fervor. "I don't think I ever in my life met with a poorer fellow."

"Oh, I have," said Lady Belvoir, throwing herself back in her chair and fanning herself lazily; "I have met with lots of poorer creatures. If you come to that, Schneider is a poorer creature. The mistake you make, my dear girl, is in asking too much of human nature. I am far more reasonable. The first thing that I ask of a man is that he should adore me; then I expect him to keep his temper with me; finally, I should like him, if he can manage it, to amuse me. But I don't insist upon that."

"And does Mr. Useless Mortal fulfill all those conditions?" inquired Dorothy scornfully.

"Mr. Useless Mortal, as you so wittily call him—by the way, Dorothy, I wouldn't display wit if I were you; it isn't a popular quality—is all that I could wish him to be. He behaved admirably this afternoon, because I did tell him that I should be at home and alone, and of course he must have thought that I had purposely misled him. When I think of the fuss that Percy Thorold used to make when these unavoidable accidents occurred!"

"Mr. Thorold was engaged to you," observed Dorothy, reddening a little, though there was no ostensible cause for her doing so.

"Yes, for a time he was; but he fussed long before he was engaged. Mr. Moreton, I am sure, would never be fussy and never try to interfere with one's arrangements. A pleasant man to marry I can't imagine, and I really quite regret that it is impossible for me to marry him."

"I am delighted to hear you say so," Dorothy declared.

"Thanks very much. Would you prefer my marrying your friend Schneider, then?"

"Of the two I think I should," answered Dorothy. "Mr. Schneider, at least, is rich enough to be disinterested."

"You almost make me wish to convince you that the other is disinterested too. But perhaps it wouldn't be worth while. Taking everything into consideration I think I will leave matrimony to you, my dear. You are better fitted for domestic joys than I am, and Percy—oh, I beg your pardon; I didn't mean to say that."

"I don't know what you were going to say," declared Dorothy, with a good deal of dignity.

"Of course you don't. Well, I was only going to say that Percy also is fitted for domestic joys. Possibly he may have told you so himself by this time."

WHISPERS ABOUT WOMEN.

Mrs. Robert Winthrop, of New York, is worth over $10,000,000.

Huldah Friedrichs has the honor of being the first lady taken on the regular staff of a London paper.

Miss Bertie O. Burr, of Annapolis, Mass., who saved two girls from drowning last summer, has been presented with a medal.

Mrs. Orma Wilson, of New York, is nothing if not English. All her entertainments are modeled after those of our British consuls.

Mrs. Stevenson, mother of the vice president elect, is eighty-three years of age and one of the best authorities on the early history of Kentucky.

Dr. Kate Campbell Hurd is medical director of the Bryn Mawr school, near Philadelphia. She is the daughter of a physician, and has studied extensively abroad.

Miss Pauline Whitney, of New York, one of the debutantes of this season, is certain to be a belle. That she is a great heiress goes without saying, for she is not only the daughter but the granddaughter of a millionaire.

Mrs. Choate, president of the New York Woman's exchange, is a tall, graceful woman, with gray blue eyes and hair slightly tinged with gray. She is always kind and sympathetic, and listens patiently to many a tale of woe.

Miss Gertrude I. Barrett, daughter of Rev. B. F. Barrett, of Philadelphia, has been made general manager of the Swedenborg Publishing association since the decease of her father, who was for many years president of the association.

FASHION'S MIRROR.

Green, gray, brown and beige are now very popular for woollens.

For velvet gowns and cloaks dark green, red and black will be most employed.

Satins have won their way back to popular favor, and now "anything that is satin" is in style.

This season will see many glaring red gowns. Red and black will be a specially favored combination.

Pansy velvet and bishop purple are Parisian favorites, and will be seen in both costumes and millinery.

A new style in all wool velvets is a bright ground in colors covered with a soft down of long white hairs.

The Russian velvets now in favor are only those of the richer grades. The lines are a thin cord of silk over a dark woolen background.

Bonnets are of all possible shades, and their garniture is often most original. There will surely be a return of flowers to favor. Already the later importations of Paris bonnets show flowers, lace and fur in close combination.

A wide furless sack coat of seal in half length shows only two seams. The front parts close by buttons, which reach to the high square collar, under which is a long hood falling down to the waist. The wide sleeves are narrow at the wrists and have no cuffs.—Philadelphia Record.

CHATS ABOUT MEN.

Franklin W. Smith, of Boston, is still agitating the establishment of a national gallery of history and art in Washington to cost ultimately $10,000,000.

Edwin Gould has ordered from a press clipping bureau "all the comments and accounts about" his father which have appeared or will appear in "all the newspapers of the world."

France has discovered that the youngest living mayor in that country is M. Degrange, mayor of Dornecilleville, who was born May 7, 1867, and who was elected eight days after reaching the lawful age.

Vice President Morton's chief enjoyment is found in social pleasures. He gives a great many dinner parties and receptions, and during the winter attends a great many entertainments. He does not care for field sports.

Senator David B. Hill combines business with pleasure, as a rule, for his chief pleasure is in politics. But he does steal away occasionally to a game of baseball and is very fond of a good minstrel show. He does not drink or smoke or play cards—in fact he has none of the usual masculine vices.

Harper's Weekly is acknowledged as standing first among illustrated weekly periodicals in America. It occupies a place between that of the hurried daily paper and that of the less timely monthly magazine. It includes both literature and news, and presents to the reader equal fascinations of the real events of current history and the imaginative themes of fiction. On account of its very complete series of illustrations of the World's Fair, it will be not only the best guide to the great Exposition, but also its best souvenir. Every public event of general interest will be fully illustrated in its pages, its contributions being from the best writers and artists in this country. It will continue to excel in literature, news and illustrations, all other publications of its class.

Harper's Bazar.
ILLUSTRATED.

Harper's Bazar is a journal for the home. It gives the fullest and latest information about fashions, and its numerous illustrations, Paris designs and pattern sheet supplements are indispensable alike to the home dress maker and the professional modist. No expense is spared to make its artistic attractiveness of the highest order. Its bright stories, amusing comedies and thoughtful essays satisfy all tastes and its last page is famous as a budget of wit and humor. In its weekly interest to women, it is included which is of interest to women. The serials for 1893 will be written by Walter Besant and Edna Lyall. Christine Treharne Herick will furnish a practical series entitled "At the Toilet." Grace King, Olive Thorne Miller and Candace Wheeler will be frequent contributors. The work of women in the Columbian Exposition will be fully represented by many illustrations. T. W. Higginson, in "Women and Men," will please a cultivated audience.

NYE ON THE NEW YEAR

IT ISN'T WELL TO BE TOO MUCH OF A "JOLLY DOG."

William Relates a Pathetic Box Office Scene—The Landlord Who Ran a Hotel at Hurley, and Something About That Place—The Newly Wedded Pair.

[Copyright, 1923, by Edgar W. Nye.] The new year brings with it many hopes and fears, joy and regret—hopes and fears for the future, joy and regret for the past. A great French philosopher says that after forty we should be very grateful if we are not absolutely and constantly unhappy. This ought to buoy up those who are only unhappy every four years or every alternate years.

"NO SEATS, I SAY!"

I like to sit down on the first day of every year for a few moments and think over the good I have done. It does not take long. I can mostly attend to it before breakfast. Then I can attend to my regrets for duties unperformed during the rest of the day. But I am a poor regretter and soon tire of this.

The glad new year should be more wisely used. We should only regret just enough to chastise ourselves, and then with a firm and rigid upper lip proceed to do better. Some people do not allow their sorrows to heal, but keep them open, torn and bleeding, just as weak and cowardly soldiers sometimes create and maintain ghastly sores in order to avoid a coming battle. We must cheerfully go forth to meet our duty with each returning year, and the home is the best place to investigate a man's efforts. There are a good many "jolly dogs" in this world; but, as Gretchen says: "Did you ever see the wife of a jolly dog? She sleeps in a kennel. Did you ever see the children of a jolly dog? They are the curs of the street."

So the jolly dog may be as bad as the malignant regretter. Let us therefore not overdo the jolly dog business with strangers and exhaust ourselves, so that at home we may be more civil. Pardon me for moralizing on the glad new year, but there ought to be one day in each year when we can put our past out on the line and look it over and pound it with a broom to knock out the harvest of selfishness and unkindness. Enough of the glad new year!

Last evening there was a pathetic scene at the box office in Paris, where we spoke for the benefit of a thrifty church society under the auspices of the ladies' committee. As usual in such cases, the seats were sold the day before. Paris generally is regarded as the wickedest and most immoral city in the world, but Paris, Ills., should not be confused with Paris, France.

We came at noon and registered at the Hotel Bristol, on the Place Vendôme—pronounced Plass Vendome—and in the evening we began, after prayer meeting, it being Wednesday evening. At 9 o'clock a tired man, with tall, heavy boots and the sad air of one who had been thirty years trying to prove that agriculture was one of the most delightful occupations known to humanity, asked the man at the box office window for a good seat.

"If you had been here yesterday," said the ticket seller, "you could have bought a seat, but not today."

"Sir," said the man.

"Seats all sold yesterday," was the gentle reply.

"I didn't hear what you said," answered the old gentleman, unrolling his ear and placing a hand with a red mitten on it behind the ear.

"No seats, I say!" was the hurried answer in a loud tone.

"Not even in the orchestra?"

"No!"

"Whassay?"

"No!"

"Well, that's me all over. Come fourteen miles over a road that's froze tighter than the top on a new bile, and can't hear nothing over eight foot to save my life, and got to buy standin room. Louisiana and the girls has got the laff on me this time."

Much has been printed throughout the United States regarding the condition of society at Hurley, Wis. Probably some of it is true. It is said that the people there are mostly miners who have been imported from abroad under contract. Some of them were caught in Poland alive, and others were snared in Russia. They talk their own language, drink alcohol when depressed mentally and chew tobacco in the English language.

Several times the world has been startled by the news that a large stockade had been established in a forest a few miles from Hurley, and that young girls were being kidnapped from Chicago to be locked up in these stockades to lead wicked lives or be cruelly slain and buried at midnight in the asparagus bed adjoining the prison. It was a sad tale and aroused much sympathy, but later information shows that these girls were kidnapped from Boiler avenue, and that they also hung on the flank of the Union army during the war. They have therefore arrived at the age of discretion. If they did not care to be kidnapped they could have gone right away from there. We met a retired landlord from Hurley on the train to Alpena the other day. He was a handsome young fellow of Irish birth and was dressed in purple and fine linen. He also wore a high silk hat, with a broad band on it, and his golden hair seemed to have caught the gleam of a dying day in October. He was just the kind of man to make a low, dirty, drunken, imported murderer mad, he looked so cool and clean and sweet.

He had been at Hurley running a hotel. He had worn a white vest one day last summer to market, also a tall hat. He did not get his marketing, but he got a wealth of tobacco juice on his white vest, and his hat was found on the roof of the opera house after ten days had sped on winged wings.

Hurley has seven or eight opera houses which are open every day in the year. The audiences are entirely men folks, and opera glasses are not called for. The Sabbath is set aside as a day for recovering from the Saturday night debauch, but the recovery also requires Monday, and even Tuesday forenoon. The Hurley jag has a worldwide reputation and speaks for itself.

Social matinees are held in the morning to accommodate the miners who work at night and cannot see society except in the daytime. Men wear their hats and smoke Cable tobacco—i. e., tobacco that one can smoke in Wisconsin and smell in Europe. Wearing their hats at these theatrical performances is a cheap imitation of the custom among ill-mannered ladies, but the tobacco habit they have picked up out of their own heads.

The opera is in the line of comic opera and consists of varied specialties and is played by artists who wear thin property clothes on the street, and their tight when on the stage show how high their boot legs come when they are dressed for the street.

The girl who sings about the picture that was turned toward the wall has an Eolian nose, through which she sings a sad lay. She stands on the outside of her feet as she warbles, and there are traces of sadness on her face, also traces of iron ore around her waist. Possibly some one has loved her—some man under the influence of drink, I mean—and with his iron covered arm has clasped her ore and ore, only to be repulsed impatiently by those thoughtless words, "Oh, go and chase yourself!"

And so he has gone away, leaving her there alone to face all those people and sing and try to be gay. Girls ought to be more careful what they say to men who are intoxicated.

Once knew of a young lady who told a man to avault under those circumstances, and now, although she is happy and wealthy, she is an old maid.

How much better it is to have some one you can call your own, no matter how worthless and low, than to be an old maid!

Hurley is gay and lively with its foreign tongues heard here and there, the merry music of the orchestra of the nearest theater and the dull thud that strikes one's ears as he is richly repaid for wearing eyeglasses on the street or wiping his nose with a handkerchief.

I can imagine a sweet voiced oponeine girl eloquently reading one of Browning's poems here to these great, strong, manly fellows who wear whiskers wherever they happen to spring up, and who drink to excess.

We did not play Hurley. I would not mind playing the Siberian tallow candle circuit, but Hurley does not appreciate real art.

Opposite to us one day in a Pullman there was a pair of newly wedded people. I was reading, but the story was too massive for me, treating of fin de cycles and one thing or another, and of living for a purpose, and of getting a firm grasp on the tail of the age in which we live, and so forth, and thus I sort of listened to the bright and childlike talk of the two sweet things cuddled up there together, with her little gray gloved hand now and then gliding through his whiskers in such a way as to make him feel that he was one great solid mass of whiskers, whereas he only had little "siders," which looked like ear muffs that had worked forward.

"And so we go to New Orleans, Ambrose," she asked as she opened her new traveling bag and took out a new cake of soap to smell of.

"Yes," said Ambrose, scowling at the toe of his new boot, which was hurting him. I judge, "we take the Q. and C. from Cincinnati, or we take the luxurious Illinois Central, which has such cunning little depots all along its line, and we will spend a week in New Orleans."

"Oh, do you look at it in that way?" suggested the young lady with sudden coolness.

"Such a waste of time," he continued, stumbling madly on to destruction.

"Sir! if you!"

"Of your time, my dear miss," he gasped on the brink, and was saved from going over.

"Don't mention it," she said sweetly, and they parted as friends, but he realized that it was a narrow escape.—Detroit Free Press.

Too Short.

"These are the shortest days in the year," said Mrs. Jimpson to her husband.

"What of it?" asked Jimpson testily.

"I'm just as short as the days and a blamed sight shorter since you came back from that shopping expedition."—Buffalo Express.

The Newly Wedded Pair.

"And what is New Orleans like, Ambrose?" she asked in a shy way, nestling her head under his arm, with her nose in his cigar pocket.

"New Orleans is an old city of the south," he said, "with crocodiles and crocodiles in it, and a shell road, so called because the two armies shelled each other along that road in the war."

"New Orleans," he said, looking hastily at his cuff, "is also a great sugar market for the plantations along the river."

"Oh, how sweet!" she said. "We will go out to a plantation where they are making sugar, and we will make wax sugar. Did you ever eat any of that, Ambrose?"

"No. What is it?"

"Why, you just take the hot sugar, you know, and pour it on the snow. It is real good."

She will make a good wife to him, I am sure, and will order things from the market. She will order her croquettes by the set and live for weeks on purple cold slaw because it matches the tablecloth.

But Ambrose will not care—that is, for three or four weeks—and then he will have the colic some night, and she will talk to him about his heart and how to keep it ever true to her, when it is not his heart that is hurting him at all, and she will put a beautiful pale blue night-shirt on him to roll on the floor in till the doctor comes, and the doctor will, after he has heard the history of the case, take her aside and tell her if she really does love Ambrose she had better get goods that will match his interior decorations instead of the tablecloth, and he will recover, and by and by they will accidentally know something.

Fortune's Smile.

"Now that I have spent a good deal of money in putting up my establishment I will wait with the hope that fortune will smile upon me."

"Ah, now! That's it—only when I say three, smile pleasantly. One, two—"

"Three!"

"What a fool I was to mention that smile!"—St. Nicholas.

The Light Headed Youth.

The clock struck 11, and the young man rose to go. "Is it possible I have been here so long?" he murmured, apologetically.

"Oh, do you look at it in that way?" suggested the young lady with sudden coolness.

"Such a waste of time," he continued, stumbling madly on to destruction.

"Sir! if you!"

THE CORNSTALK DISEASE.

Detection and Prevention of This Serious Affliction.

Dr. Frank S. Billings reports as follows:

In endeavoring to portray the symptoms of this disease we come face to face with a question of exceeding difficulty, because of their very close resemblance to other diseases which occur in cattle in our western states, and even anthrax itself offers intra-vital phenomena which more or less closely resemble those presented by this disease, especially in the most acute form. This fact has led many veterinarians into most serious errors in diagnosis. The occurrence of this disease in the months from November to March must be of essential differential diagnostic value.

Like the swine plague, this disease may be fatal in twenty-four hours, or it may extend to eight or ten days or some weeks before such a result occurs. It is not a universally fatal disease, as we now know better than ever before. Primarily we have to do with an acute blood poisoning disease, which, like all such diseases, is accompanied by a more or less excessive excretion of the bodily temperature, varying, so far as known, from 39 degs. C. to 42 degs. C.—that is, from 102.2 degs. F. to 107.6 degs. F.

These disturbances of the circulation frequently extend to the brain, where engorgement of the vessels produces a condition known as the owners call it. The animals then bellow fearfully and chase other animals, especially dogs, hogs or fowls, but seldom human beings. This has led to the mistake of their being called "mad" at times, and the disease has been talked up with so called "hydrophobia" in cattle by some veterinarians. Other animals stand by themselves or are depressed and loath to move. Separation from their companions is one of the first indications of the disease. As a rule, I can discern them by their callous and all-drink. As in swine plague and southern cattle plague, constipation is a very frequent occurrence, while laxity of the bowels also often occurs and may be looked upon as rather a favorable complication. Blood urine is not infrequently observed. The visible mucous membranes are injected and often have a yellowish red tinge. My inoculated steer drank all the time, and even ate a little during its most ill days. That such sick animals should be declined to eat and often to drink is no wonder; but if clear water is placed before them no difficulty in swallowing will be discovered. Milk cows soon slacken in their yield of the lactal fluid, and frequently the secretion ceases altogether for a time.

It must be borne in mind that if the animal and litter from a cattle yard where animals have had this disease are taken out and thrown over a field and then plowed in, and that field is planted with corn, such corn is very liable to become infested by this germ, and thus can be the cause of more losses in cattle than turned into such "a stalk field" the ensuing fall and winter.

On the eruption of this disease in a herd of cattle which have been used to do the heavy manure spreading in a stalk field, the first step to be taken is the removal of the manure and the removal of the stalk field and such fodder. The next thing to do is either to number, brand or adopt some other means by which a record can be kept of each animal in the lot, and then take the temperature of each one of the animals morning, noon and night. All with a temperature of over 102 degs. F. must be looked upon as suspicious. Those in which it does not exceed or rise over 102 degs. F. need not cause any worry. There is no need of separating the sick from the well, as the disease is not contagious.

A saline purgative is indicated for all the animals. Those that die should be cremated, and with them a lot of the litter in the yard. If possible to avoid it, the regular cattle yard should never be used for such cases, and any of them have become ill. Again I repeat in no case should a particle of the manure or refuse from a place where such cattle have been confined ever be used for fertilizing purposes. Burn it up.

The illustration of the disease in corn and descriptions of the same have put us in possession of that practical knowledge by which we should be able to invariably tell when the growing corn in our fields is infested with this germ so dangerous to our livestock. The question of prevention should be the simple matter of avoiding such corn fields as places for turning in stock to do the post harvest cleaning. From conversation with several farmers I am quite convinced that even now some of them have quite distinct ideas of the manner in which the corn itself is affected, and that as we have obtained an exact description of this part of the story from the botanical side we should now be able to totally prevent this disease in our live stock so far as the spreading of corn fields is concerned. But this will lead us to face several uncertainties, which can only be settled by careful observation by farmers and exact investigation by competent investigators.

Knowing that the corn fodder is diseased, both as to the stalks and leaves, the question is, Does the germ also penetrate the cob and growing kernel, and can they also cause the disease?

Are grasses also infested by this germ? And if so, which? This last is a very important question, for if they cannot be, then such fields can be used for raising grasses. This can be best determined by actual experiment by intelligent farmers, who should turn such fields into pastures, including patches of millet and clover and then feed a few cattle with such feed without the admixture of any other herbaceous food.

It would be well if the experiment stations would make suitable arrangements in this direction with intelligent farmers and bear the expense of the study of the disease. The latter might be tried first, as enough is now known of the germ of this disease to enable any competent person to recognize it correctly. When the corn is ripe the ears should be gathered carefully and all full ears separated from those that are incomplete in development. Feeding experiments should be made with both. After the crop of corn has been gathered a few stalks should be turned into it in order to avoid any error. Naturally each section of the field should be separated from the other, and if a Professor Burrill, after suggesting, such a field as one of "forty acres" can be pretty generally infested, such a one should be used for this kind of experimentation.

Various grasses, including millet, clover and in fact all kinds used for feeding stock should be planted in lots in such a field. One lot of each kind should be used for pasturing in the summer for a few cattle, while the crop of another lot should be preserved for winter use and then fed to a certain number of cattle.

It is too much to ask any one to make such an expense, but the interests at stake make it imperative duty of the agricultural experiment stations to do it, this being one of the purposes for which they were created, though Nebraska is the only state that has taken this study in this regard. There are an abundance of public spirited and intelligent farmers who will gladly support the work. In fact Mr. McKelvey has written me that he intends to follow up my suggestions as to grasses and millet with the field in which he has his very detailed letter stating his experiences with the disease. Later advice from Mr. McKelvey go to show that there is no danger in such grasses raised on such land.

Wherever such a disease has occurred every stalk and leaf on such a field should be destroyed by fire, and until we know to the contrary the field should be seeded down to hay. There is no question but that the infested remnants of the corn fodder can upon their decay cause the further infection of the field by the germ, and thus the disease can be spread in the soil.

The absolute necessity of tile or ditch draining the lower portions of corn fields has been so emphatically indicated by every practical observation that it would seem almost essential to call attention to it as a most essential factor in rendering our corn crop almost free from the dangers of this disease and thus save the cattle also.

Depositors are secured not only by the capital stock, but by the stockholders' liability for an amount equal to the stock, so that depositors of this institution are secured by a fund of $400,000. Five sworn statements of the condition of the bank are made each year to the United States government and its assets are examined at stated times by government agents, thus securing absolute and perfect safety to depositors.

This institution, originally established as the Deposit Bank of Stanford in 1859, is re-organized as the National Bank of Stanford in 1863 and again re-organized as the First National Bank of Stanford in 1868, has had practically an uninterrupted existence of 55 years. It is better supplied now with facilities for transacting business promptly and liberally than ever before in its long and honorable career. Accounts of corporations, educational institutions and individuals respectfully solicited.

The Directory of this Bank is composed of:

T. J. Foster, Stanford;

F. J. Hayder, Stanford;

S. H. Baughman, Lincoln;</

MEANS BUSINESS.

ENGRAVING beautifully and artistically done at A. R. Penny's.

Buy your books and school supplies of all kinds from A. R. Penny, who sells them at publisher's prices.

PERSONAL POINTS.

MISS KATE BLAIN, of Hustonville, was the guest of the Misses Ellis.

DR. W. N. CRAIG returned to his Medical College in Louisville Wednesday.

THE fire company presented Chief I. M. Bruce with a handsome arm chair and a table as a bridal present.

J. H. RAID, a Hustonville boy, but now located at Grays, was in town yesterday.

MISS ETTA YEAGER, of Boyle, the pretty sister of Mr. Thomas Yeager, is visiting him.

MRS. C. E. WILSON, of Lexington, is visiting her mother, Mrs. B. F. Jones, Sr., who continues quite sick.

MISS MATTIE AND NANNIE VANDERVEER left Tuesday to visit the family of Mr. George W. Coffey, at Orlando, Fla. They will be gone several months.

MR. MAX MANES, formerly of the Louisville Store here, but more recently located at Paris, passed through to Lancaster Wednesday to take charge of Braun's store.

MR. J. T. CARSON, of Louisville, was here yesterday. He and Mr. Charles C. Carson left this morning for Knoxville and the South to be on the road three weeks.

MR. D. I. CLARKE, of Jackson, Breathitt county, was here yesterday, the guest of Mr. W. R. Dillon. He tells us that the snow is eight inches deep in his country.

MRS. FRANK HARRIS and Albert returned from Chillicothe, O., yesterday, where they left the mercury 13° below zero. The captain says the madam must do her visiting hereafter in June or July. He came near freezing to death while she was gone.

MRS. WM. GEER received a dispatch from Columbus Grove, O., that her father, Mr. Isaac Nye, had dropped dead and she and Capt. Geer left yesterday morning to attend the funeral. Mr. Nye paid his daughter a visit here last year and although nearly 90 years old was quite active.

CITY AND VICINITY.

SCARF PIN LOST. Finder please leave at this office.

WATER white oil at 10 cents; fire proof oil at 12 cents at Higgins'.

YOUR account is ready. Call and settle. I mean you. A. R. Penny.

FOR RENT.—Office in INTERIOR JOURNAL building. Apply to W. P. Walton.

THE Tri-Weekly Advocate, Danville, three times a week for $2. Write for copy.

FOR RENT.—Stable on Depot street, with four good stalls and water. Geo. D. Wearen.

NEEDED.—What you owe me and need it bad. Accounts all copied. Please call and settle. A. A. Warren.

WANTED.—100,000 dozen eggs at 27 cents and the same number of pounds of butter at 25 cents. W. H. Wearen & Co.

Will you stand by and see such bargains as we offer in our advertisement and never come to see them? J. S. Hughes.

THE members of the fire company have decided to have a gymnasium and will likely get the room over Hutchings' livery stable for that purpose.

AUNT SALLY CALDWELL, a respected colored woman, died in Macksville Monday night. She was nearly 80 years old and had been sick several months.

It is stated that J. W. Sullivan and J. M. Blakely, merchants at Williamsburg, have quit handling tobacco because they think it wrong and injurious to the health of their customers.

HO TO THE MINSTRELS!—In order to accommodate the Rowland people, who wish to attend the minstrel performance Monday night next, Mr. P. W. Green will make a special trip with his 'bus, leaving Rowland about 7:30 P. M.

I will sell 12 tickets, good for that number of trips between Stanford and Rowland, for $1. It would be a good scheme for the merchants of Stanford and Rowland to keep their customers supplied with tickets. P. W. Green Prop. Stanford & Rowland Hack Line.

MR. A. M. SKE, who has been here a week in the interest of the National Building & Loan Association, has secured subscriptions for about 100 shares and established a board here. The association is one of the best organized. C. M. Phillips, late of Lebanon and well-known here, is general manager.

WANTED.—Eggs at 25 cents. B. F. Jones & Son.

If you need a carpet, see our new stock. Severance & Son.

At Higgins' prices you can afford to buy your next winter goods now.

MARY S. KARNES has been appointed post-master at Kendall, Russell county.

A few heating stoves left that will be sold regardless of cost. McKinney Bros.

You can afford to borrow money at 15 per cent. to buy goods at our prices. See? J. S. Hughes.

We are making a specialty of Arizona cook stoves. Every one fully warranted. W. H. Wearen & Co.

AFTER Jan. 15 I will sell beef for cash only. Beef will go at 6, 8 and 10 cents and pork at 12½ cts. J. Vest.

BURNED TO DEATH.—A little girl of Jas. Gaffney, who lives near Paint Lick, was so badly burned Saturday that she died next day.

THEY say no news is good news. If it be true Mt. Vernon is to be congratulated. Our correspondent sent this message yesterday: "No news at all."

My accounts are ready and due and I will take it as a favor if those indebted to me will call at once and settle, as I am in need of money. H. C. Rupley.

REMOVED.—Danks, the Jeweler, has moved to the new block and is now ready to wait on old and new customers at McRoberts' drug store. Give him a call.

A band with orchestra, composed of a number of young men here, is a certainty. The money has been subscribed and the instruments were ordered yesterday.

The election of directors for the First National Bank resulted in the old ones being chosen, with the exception of Mr. T. J. Foster, who had sold his stock. Mr. K. L. Tanner, of McKinney, was elected in his stead.

BROKE HER HIP.—Mrs. Sam H. Helm, who lives near Peyton's Well, in this county, fell on the ice Wednesday and broke her hip. As she is considerably advanced in years grave fears of her recovery are entertained.

An overloaded car of corn on the K. C. broke in two between Gilberts Creek and Dix River, Tuesday night, throwing it and two more cars off the track, the latter loaded with coal. It took 24 hours to clear the track.

READ the novel proposition of W. H. Higgins in his advertisement. Every $1's worth of goods you buy of him will entitle you to vote for any young lady you wish, the one receiving the largest number of votes to be entitled to free tuition in the College here for five months.

A DAIRY.—Mr. G. A. Peyton will open a dairy at the Watts place, in Stanford, next Monday, from which he will supply our people and those of Rowland with Jersey milk at reasonable rates. Such an enterprise has been needed here for some time and we hope and believe Mr. Peyton will reap a rich reward. See his ad. for prices.

STANFORD AND ROWLAND.—Beginning next Monday, Mr. P. W. Green, of the Myers House, will run a hack line between Stanford and Rowland, which will make eight round-trips a day, starting at 6:30 A. M. The fare will be 10 cents each way and as such a line has long been needed, it will likely pay from the start. It will be a big thing for our merchants, who can afford to pay the fare of regular customers. Mr. Green will take orders for goods and deliver them along the line.

THE MINSTRELS.—The newspapers in the cities of Virginia, where the Sweeney, Alvord & Goetze Minstrels have been playing, speak in unqualified praise of their performances. The Richmond State says: "It is an organization of great merit. The hand balancing of Mr. Sweeney was wonderful. The contortionists, Demonic and Moncayo, surpass any we have ever seen; they seem to break the very laws of nature. The dancing is new and good and in the finale, 'Fun on the Levee,' the company is seen at its best. The performance went with much snap and vim and there was not a dull moment from the rising to the falling of the curtain." At Walton's Opera House, Jan. 16.

WHEN Stewart M. Carson was killed by a desperado in Florida, in discharge of his duty as deputy sheriff, he held a policy in the American Accident Company, for $5,000, payable to his father, Judge Arch Carson, of Crab Orchard. The company refused to pay the amount alleging that Mr. Carson had given his occupation as a druggist, when he was deputy sheriff, and that his death was not the result of accident. Judge Carson employed Welch & Santley to prosecute the case for him and on its trial Tuesday before the law and equity court in Louisville, Judge Toney gave peremptory instructions in favor of Carson. A motion for a new trial was entered on the grounds that the court erred in several particulars, but it is hoped that this trial ends it and that the old judge will get the money, to make his life more pleasant in its few remaining years.

REMEMBER M. F. Elkin pays the highest market price for furs, beef hides, &c., in cash.

LOST.—Three bird dogs—two red dogs and a black bitch. Liberal reward. G. B. Cooper.

JACK COOK, colored, got too drunk to navigate yesterday and Marshal Newland wheeled him to jail in a wheelbarrow.

SLEIGHING is finer now than it has been during the season and the tintinnulation of the bells makes merry music for the bellies.

We should like to see the Stanford & Danville railroad proposed in another column, built, but we fear it will not be. The cost will be too heavy for private capital.

THERE has been a good deal of weather since our last report. The cold wave came as predicted, sending the mercury down to 8°, the lowest it has been observed here, though people in the country talk about 2° to 4° below. It has rained, hailed and snowed at intervals till now there are about 30 layers of sleet and snow on the ground, though the whole does not exceed four inches in depth. It has been the longest cold spell for years, and may prove a blessing in disguise. The disease germs that can withstand its severity are too tough, for weather to effect. It was snowing again yesterday and the signal service telegraphed that we may expect more of it to-day, with a falling temperature.

MATRIMONIAL MATTERS.

—Hardin Claunch and Miss Nellie Singleton were married yesterday at the bride's father's, Hardin Singleton, near Waynesburg.

—David Burton and Miss Lena, the pretty daughter of Mr. J. H. Butt, were married Wednesday. Both parties live near Highland.

—Miss Sara Payne Drake, a 16-year old Covington schoolgirl, eloped to Hampton, O., with Edwin S. Daugherty, of Dubuque, Iowa, and was married. The groom is 18.

—Miss Daisy Fitzhugh, of Lexington, the well-known contributor to newspapers and magazines, and Mr. Edward F. Ayres, a Washington lawyer, are to be married Jan. 26.

—Mr. Tevis Goodloe and Miss Harriet, daughter of Bishop Thomas U. Dudley, were married at Calvary Church, Louisville, Wednesday evening. A reception at the Bishop's followed the ceremony.

—At Sigmaringen amid royal pomp and splendor, and surrounded by European sovereigns or their representatives, Princess Marie of Edinburgh was married to Prince Ferdinand, Crown Prince of Roumania.

—Mr. B. Alexander, a prosperous merchant of Owen county, and Miss Beuregard Stuart, the handsome and captivating daughter of Mr. William Stuart, of Crab Orchard, were married at the bride's father's Wednesday. The I. J. congratulates the fortunate groom and wishes both long life and happiness.

—It is figured from statistics that a woman's chance to marry at 15 to 20 years of age is just 14½ per cent. From 20 to 25 the chance is increased to 52 per cent; from 25 to 30 it diminishes to 18; from 30 to 35, to 15½ per cent. From 35 to 40 the chances of an unmarried woman sink to 3½ per cent; from 40 to 45 a still further diminution is seen, her chance being but 2½. From 40 to 50 the old maid's chance of getting a husband is but 1 of 1 per cent, while from 50 to 55 she is supposed to have but 1 of 1 per cent. of a chance. A widow's chances to re-marry, at any age, are from 76 to 82 times better than that of a maiden.

—Mr. Isaac McRoberts Bruce and Miss Annie Wray were united in marriage at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Mollie Wray, at 7 o'clock Wednesday evening, Rev. W. E. Ellis officiating. Miss Georgie Wray and Dr. W. N. Craig were the attendants. Only a few of the closest friends were present and immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Bruce went to his home, where they are now cozily domiciled. The public seems to have recognized an affinity between the twain, now one flesh, as their names have been coupled for some time. Mr. Bruce is the well-known liveryman, industrious and popular, and he has chosen most wisely for a wife. There are few better girls than was Miss Annie Wray, and she is as pretty and as lovable as she is good. May they live and love to a ripe old age.

CHURCH AFFAIRS.

—It is claimed that there is an effort being made by the Presbyterian ministers of Cincinnati to liberalize the doctrines of that Church.

—Elder J. S. Sweeney dedicated the Christian church at Somerset Sunday morning. It is a substantial brick and cost nearly $8,000. All the congregations of the town adjourned and attended the services. The $1,100 debt on the building was raised by subscriptions taken up that morning. Dr. Pope, of Millersburg Female College, who was present, was one of the contributors.—Paris Kentuckian.

—George W. Wheatley, aged 73, and the oldest Odd Fellow in the State, died at Harrodsburg of pneumonia, Tuesday.

—Mr. J. M. McRoberts, Jr., has received notice of the death of his cousin, Dr. J. M. McRoberts, at Eminence. Dr. McRoberts was born at this place, but moved to Eminence some 30 years ago. He was in his 84th year.
